I grew up in this community. I went to high school in Turlock, where I played football and wrestled. I worked my way through college at Fresno State, where I met my wife. Our farm is a true family business. Today, I still work the same ground I grew up on, operating 40 acres of almonds and over 1,000 beehives.

I'm running for Congress to bring a farmer's common sense to Washington. It is time for an independent problem solver to help address the issues facing the Central Valley. I'll refuse pay raises, perks and taxpayer funded junkets, because true leadership begins by example.

I'm tired of the Washington DC games, the government shutdowns and the finger pointing. I'm running for Congress to find solutions for Valley families. I know the issues that are holding us back, because they are the same issues I deal with as a small business owner and a parent: a lack of good paying jobs, overcrowded and underfunded schools, out of control crime, a water shortage, and roads and bridges that are crumbling beneath us.

I'm not a politician, I'm a farmer. I don't care about partisan games or powerful special interests; I care about solving problems. In Congress, I will put the Valley first, creating jobs, ensuring that our schools have resources, and making college affordable. I'll always fight for the Valley and our shared values of hard work and accountability.

As Stanislaus County's representative, I am working to improve our economy, protect our farms and small businesses, increase water storage and eliminate debt and wasteful spending.

I'm a Stanislaus County resident, 16 year Air Force veteran and almond grower who ran for congress out of concern for the taxpayers, farmers, small business owners, seniors and veterans who needed a voice in Washington.

My top priorities are to get spending under control and get valley residents working. Irresponsible spending created a $17 trillion debt and our country is borrowing billions from foreign countries that do not share our values or priorities. Tax increases are not the answer. The average American already works until July 15 just to pay for government. We need jobs in the valley; not more regulation and government.

My Veterans Jobs Bill, signed by the President, helps returning veterans use their skills to land good jobs after their service is finished. I will always stand up for our veterans and their families.

I have the support of Sheriff Adam Christianson, all five Stanislaus County Supervisors, and many local elected officials. Please visit www.DenhamForCongress.com to learn more. It's an honor to serve you.

Thank you.
